65-foot sign felled by an ordinance

West Sacramento's tallest freestanding sign – the "whirlybird" sign at the Safeway shopping center– came down on April 15. The 65-foot sign was not in compliance with West Sacramento's new sign ordinance, which takes effect May 1.

The sign -- or its predecessors -- had twisting in the wind near Jefferson Boulevard and West Capitol Avenue since the late 1960s.

19-year old used train for suicide

A 19-year old West Sacramento man was hit and killed by a train near Harbor Boulevard and Oak Street on Wednesday morning – shortly before police received a "missing persons" report for the man, detailing that he was feared to be suicidal.

Michelle Wallace, spokesperson for the Yolo County Coroner's Office, said that Joey Daniel Ortega died from the impact and that "the cause of death is going to end up being 'suicide.'"

Lieutenant Tod Sockman of the West Sacramento Police Department said that family members had filed a "missing persons" report just after the train collision occurred.

"He was making suicide threats, saying he wanted to end his life," said Sockman.

Woman killed in crash on levee road

A West Sacramento woman died after a car crash on Old River Road north of the city on Thursday.

Kathleen Navarro, 51, was driving a car that struck a truck in the opposite lane at about 10:15 a.m. An early report to police said her Honda Accord became trapped under the truck in the accident near Monument Bend between Woodland and West Sacramento.

It was unclear who would be investigating the accident. A city police spokesperson and a Yolo Sheriff's spokesperson both said that the California Highway Patrol was handling the investigation, while a CHP spokesperson told the News-Ledger that his agency was not involved and the CHP had forwarded the case to the sheriff's office.

One witness reportedly said Navarro's car had tried to pass another vehicle on the two-lane road, striking the oncoming truck.

RCHS students join anti-tobacco effort

From Steven Jensen, MPA
Health Program Coordinator
Yolo County Health Dept.

Kids across California rallied against tobacco on April 2, as they joined thousands of young people nationwide for the 13th annual Kick Butts Day, sponsored by the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids. Hundreds of events took place across the nation, including a lunchtime tobacco education carnival put on by a group of River City High School students, who are members of the Yolo County Anti-tobacco Youth Coalition. This year, Kick Butts Day raised awareness about continued tobacco marketing and sales to kids and the need for local officials to crack down on these harmful practices.

The Yolo County Anti-Tobacco Youth Coalition, also known as YUFA STAR, celebrated Kick Butts Day with a carnival where students learned about the dangers of tobacco use through games, educational displays and free giveaways. Students at River City saw a simulated smoker's lung "breathe" demonstration, handled a rat preserved in formaldehyde (which is one of the many toxic chemicals found in every cigarette), and answered game show questions that taught them about youth marketing strategies used by tobacco companies.

Ten years after the 1998 state tobacco settlement, a new poll conducted for Kick Butts Day 2008 finds that kids still feel targeted by tobacco advertising and still find it easy to buy tobacco products. The national telephone survey of 507 teens (12-17 year olds) and 1,008 adults found:

- Three-fourths of teens (74 percent) think tobacco companies want them to smoke, and 70 percent think tobacco companies target them with their advertising.
- Nearly two-thirds (65 percent) of teens think it is easy for teenagers to buy tobacco products. Among 15-17 year olds, 76 percent think it is easy.

To protect kids from tobacco addiction and save lives, River City High students are urging local officials to pass a city law that makes it more difficult for kids to get tobacco and strengthen the penalties for those who do sell tobacco to kids.

"I don't think most kids understand the powerful influence tobacco advertising has on them, but we know that if it didn't work they would not be spending $2 million a day in California alone to trick people into thinking tobacco makes them look glamorous, grown up or cool," states Youth Coalition President, Justin Kortuem, a junior at River City High School..

Since the 1998 tobacco settlement, tobacco companies have nearly doubled their annual marketing expenditures, from $6.9 billion in 1998 to $13.4 billion in 2005 – more than $36 million per day, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

In California, tobacco companies spend $843.8 million a year to market their products.

Nationwide, tobacco use kills more than 400,000 people and costs the nation nearly $100 billion in health care bills each year, and 23 percent of high school students smoke. In California, tobacco use claims 37,800 lives and costs the state $9.14 billion in health care bills a year, and 15.4 percent of high school students smoke.

Volunteers replace stolen equipment

Volunteers helped raise money to replace playground equipment stolen in November from the CommuniCare Health Centers facility at 500B Jefferson Boulevard (near Triangle Court) in West Sacramento.

A ribbon-cutting for the new equipment is planned for noon on Friday.

Volunteers from "Active 20-30 USA" and "Active 20-30 International" raised $4,000 for new playground equipment at the clinic.

The governor's Secretary of Service and Volunteering, Karen Baker, will present the group with a commendation in honor of their work and of "Global Youth Service Day."

CommuniCare will also thank the Yolo County Construction Program, an education and training program set up for county residents dealing with drug, alcohol and other problems. The YCCP helped complete the playground.

Fluoride workshop

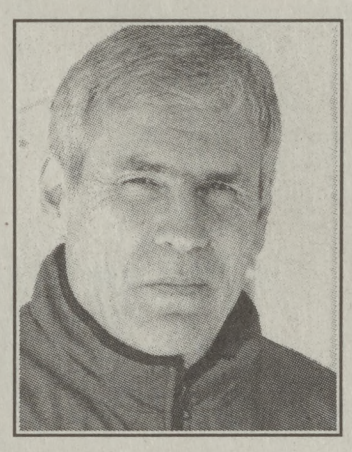
West Sacramento's new, upcoming program to fluoridate the local water supply will be the subject of an information session tomorrow from 5-7 p.m. in the city hall galleria. The city has obtained grant funding to pay for fluoridation equipment, and state law requires it to proceed.

The Department of Public Health has set the optimal fluoride level at 0.8-1.2 parts per million, or about one teaspoon in 1,300 gallons (more than 40 bathtubs), according to a city spokesperson.

City hall is located at 1100 West Capitol Avenue.

People you don't even know can change your life—

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Note: As you know, your News-Ledger reaches your mailbox on Wednesdays, and since Mondays and Tuesdays are production days here at the newspaper, I usually write my column on weekends, when it's quiet and peaceful in the office. However, this past weekend turned out to be anything but quiet and peaceful.

As I wrote in this space a couple of weeks ago, my daughter recently made me a proud grandpa for the second time. His name is Will and he had been doing just great since his birth earlier this month. However, very late last Friday night he developed a fever of almost 101 degrees, which is high for an infant, and my daughter and her husband, Dallas, rushed him to the hospital. Then came the 4 a.m. phone call that little Will was going to need a whole battery of tests, including a spinal tap, and that his fever could be an indication of a very serious illness.

As I write this, it's a glorious Sunday morning, made so by the fact that little Will passed the worst of his tests and that his fever finally broke, which should allow him to come home from the hospital later this afternoon. And for me, it's also a day to reflect back on the memory of the very special man the following column was written about many years ago:

More than a decade ago, my youngest son, Kyle, who was only about eight-months old at the time, started running a fever. Since he is my fourth child, his mother and I had had plenty of experience with sick kids and after taking his temperature, we did all the normal things all parents do. We poured as many fluids into him as we could, gave him a couple of teaspoons of infant Tylenol, and put him to bed without too many covers on top of him.

The next morning, his fever hadn't measurably decreased, so we bundled him up and took him to see his pediatrician. After what seemed to be a relatively thorough examination, the doctor told us that Kyle had a virus that was going around and it would just have to run its course. He assured us that our son would be as good as new in a couple of days and reminded us to keep giving him fluids and the appropriate dose of Tylenol.

Later that evening, my wife told me we were almost out of Tylenol and that she was going to the store to purchase some more. She deposited Kyle's hot, almost lifeless body into my arms and told me to rock him until she got back. When she returned, not more than 15 minutes later, she took one look at Kyle and with a very worried expression on her face said, "What in the world is that?"

"What are you talking about?" I asked her.

"The side of Kyle's face that you can't see is real red and swollen," she explained, her eyes filled with concern.

Upon closer examination, it was obvious that my wife was right and we quickly put in a call to Kyle's doctor, who of course was no longer in his office. Somebody on the other end of the line finally told us to take our son to a night clinic where a doctor we didn't know would try to find time to look at him. So, with me watching our other three kids, my wife wrapped up Kyle in his Cookie Monster jacket and rushed off with him into the night.

To make a very long story short, by a simple twist of incredible fate, Kyle ended up getting examined by the head of Sutter Memorial Hospital's Pediatric Intensive Care Unit, 35-year old Dr. Robert Moody, who had just happened to drop by the night clinic that evening to see how things were going.

When my wife finally called to give me an update on Kyle's condition, I could hear the panic in her voice as she said, "Try not to be too alarmed, Daryl, because all the nurses are telling me the doctor who is taking care of Kyle is the very best pediatric doctor in all of Sacramento, but he's putting Kyle into the hospital and I think you should get your mother to watch the children and get down here right away."

I got to the hospital just in time to be the one elected to hold down my terrified young son as Dr. Moody put an I.V. into a tiny vein on his little arm so that massive doses of antibiotics could quickly start making their way into his system. After that awful task had been completed, my wife took me aside and said, "We are so lucky, Daryl. Dr. Moody took one look at Kyle and immediately knew what to do. He said if we had waited even an hour longer to get Kyle medical attention, something horrible could have happened. Kyle has a very serious bacterial infection that is rapidly working its way towards his eyes and brain. Dr. Moody thinks he will be okay, but he also said things could go the other way, and that we really won't know for sure for a couple of more days."

So, thanks to a young doctor I had never even met before, and whom his friends recently described as "A brilliant leader in his field and a significant player in medicine in Sacramento and the State of California", my son slowly regained his health and was released from his caged hospital bed a little less than a week after he had been placed in it. Not only did I start breathing regularly again, but my wife finally got to stop sleeping in chairs.

Last night, as I was thumbing through the Sacramento Bee, I came across an obituary with a photo of a man I vaguely recognized next to it. I began to read: "Robert R. Moody, a former Sacramento physician whose efforts helped develop state regulations mandating trauma units for children, is dead at the age of 47. Dr. Moody ran pediatric intensive care units at Sutter Memorial Hospital and the UC Davis Medical Center before he retired four years ago and moved to Hawaii. He was killed in a fall from a building in Maui."

I reluctantly handed the obituary to my wife, who read it in disbelief.

"Daryl," she finally managed to say, repeating the almost exact same words she had said to me that wonderful morning when our son was finally discharged from the hospital, "you know, if it hadn't been for Dr. Moody, we might have lost Kyle."

Although there are no words to properly express it, my wife and I, who never saw or talked to Dr. Moody again after we profusely thanked him for bringing our son back from the edge of death, will always be in his debt.

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The NBA playoffs are off to a flying start with flagrant fouls and trash talking in full bloom with the Wizards and Cavs series looking more like an NHL hockey game. The Wizards are on a mission to knock Lebron James out of the series with some very hard body checks but who said layups are free in the NBA!

In the Eastern Conference, the Cavs will probably sweep the Wizards in four while the Detroit Pistons, who suffered an embarrassing game one home loss to the 76ers, will recover to move to the next round. The Pistons will advance in six games.

Boston should sweep the Atlanta Hawks easily but the Orlando Magic will struggle against Toronto. The Raptors have the players to post the first upset in the Eastern Conference bracket. The Raptors shock the Magic in 7 games!

The Western Conference is really up for grabs except for the Houston Rockets, who are the weakest team in the playoffs without Yao Ming at center. The Utah Jazz, who are led by Deron Williams, are very tough at home and will sweep Houston in the playoffs. Watch out for the Jazz!

The Lakers are too big and strong for the Denver Nuggets, who lack a big man at center. Kobe and Pau Gasol have too much fire power for Allen Iverson and Carmelo Anthony and the rest of the Nuggets. The Lakers win in 5 games.

The two other conference match ups are very intriguing with the defending champion San Antonio Spurs battling the Phoenix Suns, led by Steve Nash and the big cactus Shaquille O'Neal. These two teams have deep history especially after the Spurs bounced the Suns out of the playoffs last season. The Spurs outlasted the Suns in double overtime in game one but I still like the Suns to upset the defending champions. Phoenix wins in 7 games!

The other big series has Mark Cuban's Dallas Mavericks scratching and clawing against the New Orleans Hornets, who are the new team on the block. The Mavs seem to be missing a key ingredient in their team work so I'll take the Hornets in six games.

Stay tuned for round two of the playoffs as these best of seven series teams tighten up their belts a few notches but don't be surprised that the contact around the baskets continue to resemble a good old fashion hockey game!

Kings Korner

The Kings finished the 2007/08 season with a road loss to the first place Lakers but overall Sacramento improved their season record over last season. The Kings improved by 5 games and finished the 07-08 season with a 38-44 missing the playoffs by a much bigger margin (12 games) than the previous season (8 games).

They went 26-15 at home and 12-29 on the road. After selling out every home game since 1999 the Kings only sold out the three home games (against the Celtics and Lakers) during the 07-08 season averaging 13,500 fans per home game, almost 4,000 below capacity.

There is some good news for one Kings Fan. The Maloofs are send one lucky Kings season ticket holder first class to the NBA Draft lottery on May 20th to represent the Kings along with Phil Maloof. If you're a season ticket holder and feel lucky send in your letter to qualify. Check their web site for details.

Diamond Notes

The Giants (8-12) starting pitching continues to carry the team while their bullpen struggles to hold every slim lead. The Giants bats are null and void as they fight and scratch for every single run they happen to manufacture. The Giants have scored two runs or less in 10 of their games this season.

The A's (12-8), who are tied for first place with the Angels, will be playing at home during the week against the Twins before they head up north for a weekend series against Seattle.

The G-Men will finish out their road trip to Arizona and San Diego before returning to AT&T Park for a weekend series against the Reds followed by Colorado Rockies.

The River Cats (9-9) pitching staff was cruising along this season until last Saturday in Las Vegas when the 51s tagged them for 22 runs in the first two games of the series. The Cats bats are working with Carlos Gonzalez and ex-Giants outfielder, Todd Linden leading the Gatos attack. Gonzalez is batting a cool .348 and while Linden continues to clean up in the fourth spot batting .367.

The Cats will be on the road in Colorado Springs this week returning the friendly confines of Raley Field on Monday against Omaha.

Enjoy your day – see ya next week!

If the City Manager or City Council elects to secure payment of the city's costs to abate the nuisance upon the owner by placing an assessment against the property, notice of the assessment shall be provided to the property owner by certified mail pursuant to Government Code Section 38773.5. The notice shall specify that the property may be sold after three years by the tax collector for unpaid delinquent assessments. The ways of the Sacramento Transportation Co. are extremely busy now that river shipping is at its height. This is one of the largest barges on the river and has been in constant use during several years.

The U. S. snagboat Seizer was towed up stream yesterday from Rio Vista to be repaired and overhauled. Lately the Seizer went through a fire which practically cleaned out its interior, and was saved only after considerable work. Nearly all the machinery in the boat was ruined in the fire and will have to be replaced.

Mrs. R. Derr met with a serious accident last Wednesday in the Washington Bakery. A bannister protecting a stairway over which she was leaning broke under her weight and she fell to the bottom of the stairway. A closed door at that point prevented her from getting on her feet for several minutes. During that time she struggled strenuously, finally extricating herself by standing on her hands. Yesterday she was somewhat bruised but no bones were broken.

AS THE CRITIC SEES US; PARTICULARLY RELATING TO "WASHINGTON-BRODERICK-YOLO"

Washington, Yolo Co.
(By Red Nil.)

San Francisco has her Trans-Bay "Burghs," but this is Sacramento's trans-river suburb.

"Washington" is the municipal name of our village, Broderick the Federal, and "Yolo" the tourist appellation.

Yes, "Yolo" is a tourist mecca tourists come here from "The Heart of California," when our Capital City is holding her municipal elections.

Washington, we'll say, is a free town; it is free from city taxes, paved streets, street cars and "City Dads"; she also sent "over" quite a bunch of "Freedom Boys."

But let me tell you of some of our village celebrities and businesses. We'll speak of them only as kids and playthings, for grown-ups are only older kids, and their businesses new playthings, more or less; anyhow people don't get old in Washington (just ask the white-headed kid we call "Judge" or attend little Mattie's municipal "practice" dances). We'll play that I'm a "funny-picture man" and have drawn you a lot of pictures. Now, this first one at the top is Mattie, and the big white toy she is handing us is our new schoolhouse—of course some of us kicked about this matter just like "dad" does when he has to pay for all the Christmas presents, including his own, still we are right glad to have this splendid up-to-date toy, though it does make some of our other playthings look cheap. You see I've drawn a big, well-fed boy on top of the building, that means he is "holding it down." His name is Arthur; he has a fine bunch of girls helping him, too, but girls are so finical and particular that I don't like to draw them.

I want to tell you a little story about Arthur. Once upon a time (not long ago) one of our kids said to another: "Say, why do you use big words? Arthur don't use big words, he just calls us 'bone-heads.'" Well, the other thought that a good joke so he "sprung" it on Arthur. But our hero didn't seem to appreciate the jest for the next day he lined up those kids and demanded to know if he had ever called any of them "bone-heads," whereupon most of them answered "no" (least-while none of them answered yes). "No," he continued, "I did NOT call you boneheads, I would not use such language; I only told you not to be boneheads; now don't misquote me hereafter."

Arthur is another acquisition of Mattie's. I guess she told him that he could play here as long as he wanted to so far as she was concerned; he seems to like the place, too, anyhow we like him.

(2) Here is another picture of Mattie. She and the tall girl are not fighting; they are just pulling each other's hair for fun. "Mattie can hold her own, too."

(3) The next picture is of our Town Hall and "Fire Station No. 1," another of our play houses. It's a little old-fashioned, like most of our village, but it suits us. The stocky boy astirde the house is James—James don't get any marbles for "holding this down," and he wants to get off, but we won't let him.

On the hall porch you see a fine looking, square shouldered chap, who might pass for either Senator or parson. That is "Judge," and the big muscular one is Billie. Billie and Judge play Police Court. Billie brings in bad boys, to which Judge administers "the majesty of the law." Sometimes Judge smiles as he seems to say, "Oh, let us give him another chance, Billie, you know we are all just kids."

(4) You will notice in this next picture a big, intelligent looking "newsy" trundling his little wagon over the bridge toward "Yolo,"—that is Peter. Peter has "some punch," and he can do other things besides sell papers, but he seems to like the news business because, among other things, he can put in a few knocks, or perhaps do a little slugging once in a while. Jolly good fellow is Peter, and we are glad of his adoption.

(5) Here are three of our boys —"Jonny," Ed and Curtis, you see I pictured them loading schooners, but since large vessels are no longer safe of late I hear they have changed to the pony business.

Speaking of boats: We have a certain Robert here who is quite handy with water craft, but as to land boats, when they refuse to float he can just roll into "any old haystack and sleep till the morning dawns. Then there is Cassie; his ship plant is but a tumbledown relic of the pioneer days, nevertheless he is doing quite a bit toward getting the wheat and beans "over" so that our boys can shoot the Kaiser.

(6) The trim little chap with the long sleek doggie (wiener) is Eddie. Eddie has a partner, but I just wanted to say that Eddie is learning to dance and that he isn't married (yet) either.

(7) This big boy in the grocer's wagon is Pearl no, not a girl. He keeps two or three of these wagons moving. You see he has Jimmy and Herbert to help him. Jimmy and Pearl are most generous and patriotic boys; they used to go out almost every Sunday to shoo (!) the ducks and geese off the crops so that the farmers could go to church. Pearl is one of these Hooverizing grocer boys. He makes us go fifty-fifty all right, still it is not Hooverizing to haul him around on his gas wagons.

(8) "Bobby, the old timer," who is flagging the S. P. crossing, is strong on religion and politics, although not strictly orthodox, nor is he a standpatter either. Bobby can argue "some," believe me bo, but don't try to out talk him, he'll flag YOU too.

(9) Those boys with the toy drums and tin horns are playing band. "Get tired of their noise?" No, indeed. They are doing fine and will be musicians some day. We are proud of them, even if some are a little off in tune.

(10) The boy on the water wagon is Henry; some naughty boys call him "Buck," but we don't like that name. Henry is a fine straight sober boy, but he don't always stay on the water wagon no, he drives other wagons too.

(11) You see the chubby little fellow standing in the door of our "GRAND ROYAL ICE CREAM U. S. Postoffice?" That is Jack. Jack can play the most games of any kid you ever heard of. He plays Postoffice, Confectioner, News Agent, Labor Agent, News Correspondent, Recruiting Officer and Baby and Alien Registrar. You would hardly believe it, but Jack plays his games for sixteen hours a day and for seven days per week. Jack is learning to dance, too; perhaps he thinks it will help him in his games.

(12) Now, this last picture represents our S. P. passenger depot; it may remind you of an umbrella as to size, but it is really quite handy to keep off rain and sunshine while waiting for the motor which stops here.

We don't care if Sacramentans do call us "Yolo Mudhens," we admit that we can pick and scratch for ourselves.

HORRORS! SANCTIMONIOUS PRECINTS OF COUNTY SEAT WILL BE DEFINED BY ROUGH-NECKS

(Special to The Independent.)

Woodland, March 16.—Yip! Yip! The "town's" all "het up."

This city of spotless, stockyardless, saloonless fame, is going to have a fight. Yep—an honest-to-goodness quarrel.

Yip, again!

And what's more, it's going to be a series of rows.

Twelve gloved athletes are going to step into a roped arena and assail each other while seven or eight hundred sport lovers holler themselves hoarse.

The occasion is dated for Tuesday night, March 26, and it's said that the "natives" young and old have dotted down the time, so are to be there.

One Soldier Woods from San Francisco and one Frank Denny of Oakland, two battling rams, will meet in the final head-on collision. And it's sure going to be some bull fight, judging from the contests these two boys have put up at Sacramento. Neither scrapper is credited within thinking more than twice a month, and both boys are mixers of the Donnybrook school of boxing. It's sure slated to be some mill.

Then for the special events, the Yolo County seaters will bring together none other than Danny Nunes, a Sacramento boy who seeks to be Coast featherweight champ, and Al Proose, a terror from San Francisco.

Jimmy Marshall and Billy Papke, Capital City boys who couldn't settle their grudge at Sacramento because Marshall didn't think he'd get a square deal, will quarrel in another special bout in Woodland.

The prelims will bring together Young Willard, a six-footer, 193-pounder from Davis, and Soldier Mike Gorskie, a heavyweight from the Presidio in San Francisco; and Porter Diggs of Woodland and Toby Owens of San Francisco; and Joe Perry of Oak Park and Jimmy Doyle of Sacramento.

Headed by Jerome Barry, Billy Leinberger, Bob White and a few other stellar sportlights, it is thought that a big delegation of Washington fans will make the journey to help Woodland "dissipate" on March 26.

Let's all go, boys! It's seldom they get "het up" like this at the county seat.

LIBERTY LEAGUE LAUNCHED WITH MUCH ENTHUSIASM

In the public school auditorium last Thursday evening a branch of the Liberty League of Yolo County was organized by many enthusiastic citizens of Woodland, accompanied by Judge W. A. Anderson, Fred Shafer and C. F. Evans as spokesmen of the evening.

With very short notice the meeting was called, yet the organization was perfected and officers elected to start out this worthy cause.

A whole carload of Woodland enthusiasts came from the county seat to help along and they were boosters. The Home Guard was particularly conspicuous.

Following the meeting 35 members signed the roll of membership and the following officers were elected: President, Frank Korrell; Vice-President, W. A. Parkinson;

No fan of the mayor

The recent revelations regarding Mayor Cabaldon's booting for unpaid tickets might qualify as a tempest in a teapot if not for its place in a pattern of less than honorable behaviors. His excuse that he has been "too busy" to attend to his obligations is telling. How difficult is it to put a check in the provided envelope, put a stamp on it and put it in the mail?

First of all, Mr. Cabaldon moved to West Sacramento for the (unexpressed) purpose of moving on to higher office, which he now seeks. Secondly, throughout his terms on the city council and as mayor, he has claimed credit for just about everything that has occurred here, from Raley Field to Tony's Fine Foods solar installation to building of Ikea, Home Depot, WalMart, etc. This has all been the result of freeway geography, proximity to downtown, and development, which inevitably resulted from the Palamidessi Bridge. These false claims are rank opportunism.

On a darker note, the mayor sent out a flyer with his opponents photos manipulated to resembles mug shots, with "Wanted" stamped across their faces, timed to arrive three days before the election. He accused his opponents of being tools of special interests, with clever timing allowing no response. The record speaks eloquently to this accusation. Campaign donors to Cabaldon's campaign were overwhelmingly developers. This was not the case for Mary Lasell, Mark Johannessen or Jim Cahill.

There is also reason to believe that his campaign paid for the sudden and exponential growth of the heretofore nearly defunct West Sacramento Democratic Club, artificially inflating his delegate count at the state convention.

Clearly, this is a person we want in neither the legislature, nor West Sacramento political office.

Turn off the TV!

Here is how it shakes down: "For every hour of television a child watches each day, the risks of developing attention deficit disorder increase by 10%; and children who have a television in their rooms are 31% more likely to become overweight." (Center for Screen-Time Awareness, 2008)

Here's your opportunity, while the springtime weather is inviting for outdoor activities (and you can probably afford to miss some of the NBA playoffs since the Sacramento Kings didn't make it this year), for you to try out a new activity or two and make a commitment to your own health or that of your family.

Every year following TV Turnoff Week, people tell me how glad they are to have been liberated from some of the senseless garbage we consider entertainment on "the tube". A few years ago, a woman in Sacramento told me, with tears in her eyes, that she persuaded her husband to have dinner without the TV on and it was the first time in years that he spoke to her during the evening meal. I have known of more than one local family who have lived without television and how much better behaved they believe their children are because of it.

Television has been linked to so many ills it is difficult to imagine anyone who would not want to exert more control over these electronic monsters in the home, for a week anyway. Violent and aggressive behavior, lower reading scores and poor academic achievement, obesity and poor physical fitness – the list is endless.

Do members of your household move from the computer screen to video games to the television set to text-messaging at all hours? Let this be the week you demonstrate you don't need electronic screens to monopolize your lives. OK, it is not exactly New Year's resolution time but why wait another eight months for something that you can enjoy right away?

With all the interesting, creative, and fun activities available, you, too, will wonder why you ever spent so much time in front of a screen. Join us!

Mayor should use public transit

There's no doubt that West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon has led the way for the past decade or so in achieving major improvements for this city. But as he appears to be a shoo-in for the democratic assembly nomination, he appears to have over-flexed his power, including not recusing himself from agenda items involving the proposed Yarborough project (even though advocates contributed money to his assembly campaign) and spending over $6,000 from his old mayoral campaign funds to pay dues for roughly 725 "new" West Sacramento Democratic Club members to increase his delegate count from maybe 2-1.

Finally, I know Mayor Cabaldon "has a lot of pull", but having one's car towed for non-payment of parking tickets? Mr. Mayor, one can always use public transit or taxicabs.

Child Abuse Prevention Month

Many of us think of child abuse in terms of the most extreme, dramatic criminal cases and we worry about what to do if we witness or suspect child abuse. For hundreds of Yolo County children, it is not a case of abuse or neglect; it is simply numerous lost opportunities to make a positive impact on that child's life.

At First 5 Yolo we fund programs and services that support parents and families so children 0 to 5 years of age enter school healthy and ready to learn. We believe the best way to prevent child abuse is to reduce caregiver stress or substance abuse and stop the anger, neglect and child abuse before it happens. In fact, for every dollar invested in prevention, Yolo County can save an estimated ten dollars that would otherwise be spent dealing with the consequences of child abuse.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month and First 5 Yolo has joined with the Yolo County Children's Alliance and Child Abuse Prevention Council in a public awareness campaign encouraging parents and caregivers to "Take a Minute to Make a Difference in the Life of a Child."

By focusing on the positive: hugging, talking, praising and making children feel safe and secure, they will grow as more loving, caring people and, in the future, become better parents and successful adults themselves. This is a worthwhile way to spend a minute.

Watch the money

In the March 26th addition of this paper, Liz Bagdazian wrote about a Washington Unified School District scrapbooking program that was $12,000. The original contract for that program was approved by the Board on December 13,2007, where the contract also stated that the classes would be held after school at six school sites and would accommodate 25 students per school. While the money used for this was funded through a program that, as the Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services, said "has plenty of money in it".

The point I originally made and more recently made when it came before the Board to approve the payment (March 27th) for the services rendered was, we could be using the money more wisely that affected a broader scope of students, especially since the teachers at the the elementary level usually make some kind of "all about me" book in their classrooms each year verses a professional, expensive scrapbook. At least my children did in elementary. At the March 27th meeting, the payment was brought to the Board in the amount of $19,500. I again voiced my concern about the fact that the money could be used to better educate our children, such as tutors or something that would help to bring up test scores, the Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services implied I didn't know what I was talking about to the point I doubted myself until I went home and found the original contract and agenda packet transmittal from December 2007. The other issue I have is that the payment the District made to the company was the fact it was for $19,500 not the original $12,000 that the Board approved. At the last Board meeting on April 10th, I again voiced my previous issues but also pointed out the fact the payment made to the company was $7,500 more than what the Board originally approved. Why was the difference not approved by the Board, as required by the Districts policies, before hand? Or did we end up paying $31,500 total being that the Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services, stated that more than 25 students per school participated? Either way, I have yet to be answered let alone to receive any type of apology, public or otherwise, as I requested of the Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services because of her rude behavior and belittling comments when I was right to begin with. Was she hiding something like another contract without Board approval due to the fact that many people were unhappy with the original contract to begin with? Regardless, the additional amount had to be approved by the Board before payment since it was over $5,000. This raises an audit issue for the district, as well.

Tomorrow, Thursday, April 24th, is the next meeting at City Hall. Please, get involved and be informed with the truth!

CRITIC'S CORNER

By D.NA Smith

"Nim's Island"

Running time: 96 minutes
MPAA rating: PG

"Nim's Island" is a rarity among children's movies these days. First of all, the hero of the film is an 11-year-old girl, and thankfully, the filmmakers allow her character to be a girl instead of the all-too-familiar wise-cracking, knowledgeable-beyond-their-years kids we constantly see. Also, the film doesn't pander to adults by throwing in pop-culture references or wink-wink, nudge-nudge innuendo.

The film stars Abigail Breslin as Nim, daughter of a widowed plankton researcher ("300" star Gerard Butler). The pair lives on an idyllic island in the South Seas where dad researches rare species of one-celled organisms. Nim spends her days being "island schooled," frolicking with her animal friends and awaiting the next volume of her favorite novel series featuring intrepid explorer Alex Rover.

One day dad goes out on a boat to find more wee beasties, leaving Nim back on the island. When a monsoon hits, stranding the father at sea, Nim is left to fend for herself as a group of "pirates" invades the island.

Nim is also injured, so she e-mails the only person she thinks can help her: Alex Rover. Unfortunately, Alex is not a strapping hunk of Australian beefcake, but an agoraphobic writer named Alexandra (Jodie Foster) living in San Francisco. Summoning all her courage, Alexandra leaves her house and sets off to rescue Nim.

"Nim's Island" is for the most part a movie for girls ages 7 to 12. It has a playful innocence to it that I found refreshing, despite the fact that this movie wasn't made for my gender or age group. I'm positive little girls will adore this film. I'm not so sure about little boys. Or big ones, for that matter. But so what? They have their own movies.

Two Weeks of Life: A Memoir of Love, Death, and Politics
by Eleanor Clift
(Basic Books, $26)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

In early 2005, Eleanor Clift's husband and partner for more than 20 years, journalist Tom Brazaitis, slipped into the final stages of a losing battle with kidney cancer. As he lay dying in the hospital bed that had been set up in the living room of their Washington, D.C., home, the Terri Schiavo right-to-life case was playing out on a national stage in Florida. Tom and Terri would die just one day apart, but their final weeks could not have been more different.

In an intimate and deeply touching memoir, Clift recounts the death of both her husband and Terri Schiavo, as observed from two very different vantage points, one personal and the other professional. Clift, a contributing editor for Newsweek magazine and a regular panelist on the nationally syndicated show "The McLaughlin Group," shared evenings with her husband. Her days were spent writing and discussing on national TV the furor that erupted over Schiavo's fate.

Written in the form of daily diary entries beginning on March 17, 2005, and ending March 31, 2005, the day of Terri Schiavo's death and one day after Tom's, Clift's memoir touches on many basic issues.

For example, she reveals how her life with Tom was changed by his diagnosis, and in many ways it deepened their affection for each other. She documents her experiences with hospice care and how to best cope with dying. She also questions the role, if any, that government should play in end-of-life decisions.

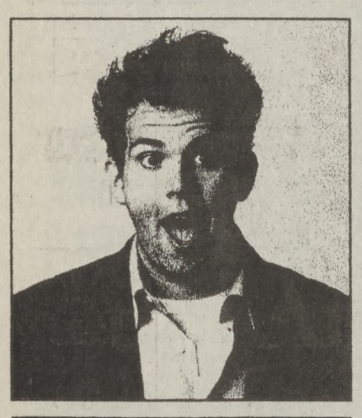
Fave Foods of the Famous

by Steven Austin



Jake Sasseville

He started his television show when he was 15 years old growing up in a small town in Maine. "The Edge With Jake Sasseville" was an instant cable access hit, and it now appears on ABC-TV affiliates around the country, right after Jimmy Kimmel's late night show. It's also found on MY9 in New York City and MY13 in Los Angeles.

Sasseville's wild interviews, crazy stunts and other offbeat features make this young star someone to look out for in the future. And with sponsors like Ford and Overstock.com, he's building a brand that has both remarkable talent and solid financial support behind it. To learn more: www.edgewithjake.com

Name a celeb you'd like to have a real food fight with. And what foods are flying?

"I'd love to have a food fight with Drew Barrymore and Shakira. I'd say some mashed potatoes would be launched from Drew's plate, and for some reason, the image of Shakira slapping me with Arepas Con Queso keeps coming to mind. And there's nothing quite like sinking Dunkin' Donuts Munchkins in the mouth of "30 Rocks'" Katrina Bowden at a major American doughnut shop. ... Who says you can't have your own talk show AND live out childhood fantasies?"

You're still in college. Give us a funny tale about the meal plan at Marymount in New York.

"What meal plan? Marymount has basically taken New York City prices, doubled them and then tagged food that tastes like it was made 10 years ago in a hut somewhere far, far away. Even the Diet Iced Tea costs a small fortune."

Robin Williams is one of your comic idols. If you could enjoy a casual lunch with him, what would the conversation be like?

"I'd probably relate our experiences. Talk about how he used to be on coke — cocaine — in the '80s when he was first starting out, and then gave it up, and how I used to drink Coke — Coca Cola — on the set of my local access TV show and then gave it up. I'd probably mention to him about my nasty obsession with the girl who played his daughter in "Mrs. Doubtfire" back in 1994 and ask for the hookup. And we'd probably leave Harry's Burrito's on the Upper West Side and skip down Columbus Avenue like Borat."

Name a New York City street food that you'd never, ever eat?

It is only after explosive diarrhea that I learned to never eat the lamb at 46th and Broadway. You don't need to slap this dog twice!"

Which fast-food chain probably has the most bizarre customers?

"Ha ha. Blimpie!"

DETAILED SUMMARY OF THE MATTER THAT PLAINTIFFS SEEK TO VALIDATE:
Plaintiffs AUTHORITY and CITY seek to stimulate the development of Plaintiff CITY's downtown into a vibrant riverfront community that is a regional destination by building a hotel on land near the right bank of the Sacramento River directly across from Old Sacramento. In the transactions that plaintiffs' governing bodies approved at their March 19, 2008, meetings, plaintiff AUTHORITY would issue up to $250,000,000 in lease-revenue bonds, and plaintiff CITY and plaintiff AUTHORITY would enter into the Indenture, the Lease Agreement, and the Assignment Agreement for the purpose of financing the acquisition of the land, which is located within CITY's boundaries, and the construction of a hotel and related infrastructure thereon. The AUTHORITY would construct and own the hotel. The hotel development would include a public parking facility, public meeting rooms and conference rooms, public restrooms, and public restaurants and bars. The CITY would lease the hotel from the AUTHORITY and would operate the hotel. When all of the Bonds were fully paid and retired, the City would own the hotel development.
